

LAST EDITION. NOT CAUGHT YET.

Many Arrests, but the New York Ripper Is Still at Large.

Detectives in Private Clothes Swarm in the Fourth Ward.

Inspector Byrnes Visits Brooklyn This Morning on Alleged Clues.

Proof by the Autopsy That Carrie Brown Was Strangled Before Her Mutilation.

Parts of the Body Missing and Supposed Carried Away by the Murderer.

No crime which has been committed in this city for years has stirred the police department to such tremendous activity as the horrible butchery of Carrie Brown, alias "Old Shakespear," by "Jack the Ripper," or his double, at the East River Hotel.

Since noon yesterday the Fourth Precinct has been fairly alive with detectives and policemen in citizens' clothes. They have been dragging all the low dives and resorts on Cherry Hill and its vicinity, in the hope of discovering some clue to the escaped murderer.

He is still at large, so far as can be learned from the police authorities no trace of him has yet been brought to light.

This morning it was stated that fully one-half of the detective force of the Central Office was engaged in the investigation under the direct supervision of Inspector Byrnes and Capt. McLaughlin.

In addition to these all the available reserve force of the Fourth Precinct, together with Ward Detectives Doran and Griffin, under Capt. O'Connor, are assisting in the work of chasing up clues and winnowing reports and rumors, many of which are of the wildest and most improbable character.

In every precinct, too, throughout the city the police have been warned to keep on the lookout for any one who answers to the description of the supposed murderer which has been furnished by Mary Minster, the housekeeper of the hotel.

That they are on the alert is shown by the fact that one arrest has already been made in another precinct.

KALLENBERG SET FREE.

This street was made about 1 o'clock this morning by Officer Mitchell, of the Elizabeth street police. He found a German, about thirty-five years old, who said his name was Adolph Kallenberg, and that he had no home, loitering in Chatham square.

He was sent down to the Oak street station about 1 o'clock this morning. Capt. O'Connor says that he discharged him because he was evidently not the man whom he wanted.

He declined to say whether Mary Minster, who was one of those detained as witnesses, had seen the prisoner or not. He was satisfied that he knew nothing of the murder and was not concerned in it.

THE CRIME ON THE WALL.

Before daylight this morning, many arrests were made in the precinct and a dozen or more prisoners were brought to the Oak street station.

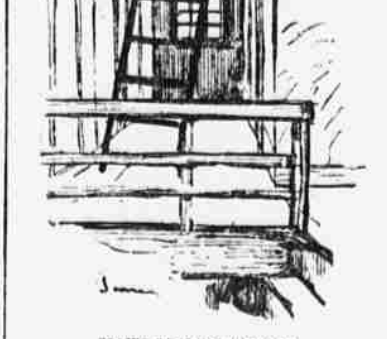

Some of them were discharged, and some of them held. Capt. O'Connor said this morning that he had only seven prisoners in the cell, five of whom were women and two men.

They were all held, he said, as witnesses, and not one as a principal in the crime. The man, George Francis, alias "Frenchy," who was arrested early last evening, and was believed to be a suspect, Capt. O'Connor says is only a witness who knew the old woman "Shakespeare," and who might give the police information regarding her life and associates.

The others were William Heile, Mary Heile, Lizzie Carter, Florence May, Mary Lohsey, Mary Minster and Alice Sullivan.

At 10.30 this morning Capt. O'Connor appeared at the Coroner's office with James Jennings, the proprietor of the East River Hotel, and Samuel Shine, his bartender.

STAIRS LEADING TO ROOM.

At the request of the Captain, Coroner Schultz issued an order that all these persons should be sent to the House of Detention pending the investigation of the murder.

Francis May was discharged, however. Most of them were picked up by the police and the detectives in the wretched dives which abound in the neighborhood of Cherry and Water streets.

It is said that the man William Heile is a sailor, and was arrested on board of one of the vessels lying along South street. He was seen with "Old Shakespeare" within the past two or three days.

Francis or "Frenchy" is a well-known character in the neighborhood, and is said to be a desperate man. He is described by Bartender Thompson, of the East River Hotel, as a dark, swarthy-skinned man, of medium height, and is supposed to be half negro and half Spaniard.

He came from Cuba, and has recently occupied rooms at the "hotel" on several occasions with different women, of the most abandoned class. He was there on Wednesday night, and on Thursday night had a room alone on the top floor, adjoining the one occupied by "Old Shakespeare" and the supposed "Jack the Ripper."

William C. Mannix, a coal heaver, who works at the South street coal docks, and who says he has lived with his wife at the East Side Hotel during the past week, told an EVENING WORLD reporter this morning that "Frenchy," who had a room on the same floor with him, had on Wednesday morning tried to break into his wife's room after he had gone to work.

He had threatened his wife with terrible consequences if she did not let him in, but she refused to open the door, and he finally went away breathing vengeance. Mannix says he saw Frenchy trying drunk in the narrow hallway on the top floor late on Thursday night, when he went to his room.

LOOK FOR THIS MAN.

The description of the murderer upon which the police are working was given by Mary Minster, the assistant housekeeper, who was the only person who saw the old woman and her companion come in on Thursday night and go upstairs together.

She says he was about 5 feet 8 inches in height and was lightly built. His features were sharp and his nose was long and came down to a sharp point.

THE MURDERED WOMAN.

This morning it was stated that fully one-half of the detective force of the Central Office was engaged in the investigation under the direct supervision of Inspector Byrnes and Capt. McLaughlin.

In addition to these all the available reserve force of the Fourth Precinct, together with Ward Detectives Doran and Griffin, under Capt. O'Connor, are assisting in the work of chasing up clues and winnowing reports and rumors, many of which are of the wildest and most improbable character.

In every precinct, too, throughout the city the police have been warned to keep on the lookout for any one who answers to the description of the supposed murderer which has been furnished by Mary Minster, the housekeeper of the hotel.

That they are on the alert is shown by the fact that one arrest has already been made in another precinct.

KALLENBERG SET FREE.

This street was made about 1 o'clock this morning by Officer Mitchell, of the Elizabeth street police. He found a German, about thirty-five years old, who said his name was Adolph Kallenberg, and that he had no home, loitering in Chatham square.

He was sent down to the Oak street station about 1 o'clock this morning. Capt. O'Connor says that he discharged him because he was evidently not the man whom he wanted.

He declined to say whether Mary Minster, who was one of those detained as witnesses, had seen the prisoner or not. He was satisfied that he knew nothing of the murder and was not concerned in it.

THE CRIME ON THE WALL.

Before daylight this morning, many arrests were made in the precinct and a dozen or more prisoners were brought to the Oak street station.

Some of them were discharged, and some of them held. Capt. O'Connor said this morning that he had only seven prisoners in the cell, five of whom were women and two men.

They were all held, he said, as witnesses, and not one as a principal in the crime. The man, George Francis, alias "Frenchy," who was and just over the head of the stairs is a scutcheon opening on the roof. It can be reached by a small iron ladder.

One of the theories advanced to account for the escape of the murderer without being seen as he passed out, is that he climbed up through this scutcheon and passed over to a neighboring roof.

The only roof which he could have reached, for all the adjoining buildings but one are considerably lower than the East River Hotel, was that of the furnished-room house at 380 Water street. This is next door to the hotel and is kept by a man named Berliner.

It was said at this place this morning that the scutcheon on the roof was always kept fastened on the inside and no one could possibly get into the house in that way.

On the other hand, if the murderer had pushed his bloody work before 1 o'clock in the morning, he could have gone down the stairway and passed out into the street through the private drinking-room, without attracting any attention from those in the barroom adjoining.

Many were in the habit of doing this every evening, bartender Shine said, and unless some one had happened to step into the passageway at the time a person going out would escape notice entirely.

After one o'clock the door leading from the key into the private room is locked and the key is taken by the night bartender. This door is not opened again until five o'clock in the morning. The hall door opening into the street is kept locked all night long and the key is taken from the lock.

EXTERIOR OF THE HOUSE.

It is barely possible that the murderer might have waited until 5 o'clock before he left the place, but this is not regarded as probable by the police, as he would have had fully two hours in which to complete his work and then get away before the door was closed at 1 o'clock.

A strange thing about the case is that no marks of blood appear either upon the furniture of the room or on the door knob or wood work.

How a man could accomplish such a fearful butchery without having the marks of rapine upon him is a mystery which is not yet explained.

During the morning Detective Doran and Policeman Cunningham, of the Oak street station, were stationed at the house. They were on the lookout for people who might visit the place, and who might be able to give some information.

THE KNIFE, SPECTACLES AND SCRAP-BAG.

Has been produced by a tightened cord or finger nail. There was no evidence of wounds or injuries on the breast.

On the left thigh, or anterior portion of the body, extending upon the abdomen, was a scratch about fifteen inches long, accompanied by another abrasure about seven inches long. An incised gashing wound began on the right side and extended upward penetrating the abdominal cavity just above the junction of the pelvic bones. There were four incisions made by the knife, through which a portion of the intestines protruded.

A portion of the small intestines as well as the left ovary had been torn out. There was considerable hemorrhage in the abdominal cavity, and this wound was doubtless produced by a right hand upward cut while the unfortunate woman lay on her back. Two slight scratches were noticeable on the right side of the groin which penetrated the skin.

When the woman was turned over on her face, Dr. Jenkins met a superficial two-armed scratch in the form of the letter V across the left thigh. One of its arms was horizontal and straight, about ten inches long, while the other was a curved line six inches long.

Dr. Jenkins postulated the opening of the body until it had been photographed. He said that he was of the opinion that death was due to strangulation.

The murderer accomplished his crime by first choking the woman, and then proceeded to wear her while she lay on her back. The wounds showed that he had backed at her several times, and then, while she lay on her right side, he finished his work by making the cross-like mark.

Either of the anterior or posterior cuts would have produced a fatal hemorrhage. Dr. Jenkins said Col. Volmer entertained similar opinion.

BYRNE'S VISIT BROOKLYN.

The Brooklyn police evidently obtained a clue to the murderer, as Chief of Police Campbell sent out to all the station-houses in Brooklyn a description of a man wanted in connection with the murder. The message was a secret order, and a copy of it cannot be obtained.

As soon as it was received in the station-houses officers were sent out on the case. As a result, at 4 o'clock this morning Police Capt. Benson, of the lower Fulton street station, visited the People's Lodging House, at 68 Fulton street, and there arrested on suspicion a man who gave his name as Frederick Strube. He is a German, twenty-six years old, and said that he had formerly worked as a butcher.

THREE ARRESTS IN BROOKLYN.

He came to the lodging-house at 1 o'clock this morning. He was "detained" in the station-house, and word was telegraphed to Chief Campbell, who notified Inspector Byrnes of the arrest.

No regular entry of the arrest was made on the official return sent to Headquarters, and the arrest was kept secret until some hours afterwards.

Shortly after 9 o'clock Detective Sgt. McNaughton, of Byrnes's staff, went over to Brooklyn and had a talk with the prisoner. Strube fully accounted for his time for several days past and said that he was convinced he was not the man who was wanted. Strube was then discharged.

At 10.50 o'clock a group of reporters, among whom was an EVENING WORLD representative, were waiting in Chief Campbell's outer office, when Inspector Byrnes walked in and immediately disappeared inside the Superintendent's office.

He remained there until 11.10 o'clock and then came out. After leaving the building he was joined by Detective "Jack" O'Brien, and they boarded a car and rode to the bridge, where they came to New York and took a Third Avenue train.

Several precinct detectives were called to Brooklyn Police Headquarters this morning and sent on a special mission. When asked if strangulation, the murderer having probably first choked the woman and then while the body was yet warm, mutilated it with his big knife.

MARY HEILEY.

He found, however, a cut on the right ear, from which blood had flowed, and which is evidence that a struggle took place between the murderer and his victim before the Ripper accomplished his purpose.

The autopsy showed that the first cut made with the knife was a downward thrust near the ear, with the knife held perpendicular.

From that there was a jagged cut four inches deep and which was carried round to the back of the body, ending one inch above the termination of the spinal column.

The two cuts in the posterior region forming the murderer's cross were six inches long and one inch deep.

On the woman's neck were three abrasions, caused when she was choked.

Dr. Jenkins found that the woman might have been sixty-two years old when she met her death. The body was fairly nourished and preserved.

On examining the head he found that there were evidences of constriction in the shape of those marks on the throat which might have time laying his plans for a series of crimes which would startle this city as they had the people of London.

POSITION OF THE BODY WHEN FOUND.

Everything about the crime pointed to the fact that it was perpetrated by an accomplished assassin and with the utmost deliberation.

The methods were almost exactly the same as those of "Jack the Ripper," and a repetition of the same kind of butchery would undoubtedly occur unless the murderer should be discovered and arrested before he had time to arrange for another slaughter.

Another theory is that the murderer is only an imitator of "Jack the Ripper," who had become familiar with the methods of the Whitechapel assassin through the published accounts of his crimes.

It is also surmised that he may be a sailor, who, as soon as he had finished his bloody work, made his way from the hotel to his ship, and sailed away before the crime was discovered.

The Fourth Precinct has been so thoroughly sifted up within the last twelve hours that it would be almost impossible for a murderer whose description has been given with so much detail to find concealment there.

In the afternoon no policemen were stationed at the hotel, at Catherine slip and Water street. The place was shadowed, however, by detectives in citizens' dress, and all suspicious persons were carefully watched and followed.

It now appears that Eddie Fitzgerald, the bartender who was on duty Thursday night, did not see the companion of "Old Shakespeare" at all. He simply entered the name C. Kinloch in the register, which had been given to him by Mary Minster.

The couple did not go beyond the little hallway from which the stairs lead up to the floors above.

Two other arrests were made in Brooklyn by the Second street police.

John Foley and Frank McGovern were arrested on suspicion by Mounted Officer Frank. In a general way they answered the description of the man who went with Carrie Brown to the East River Hotel.

They were taken before Justice Walsh and remanded.

DID HE STAY AT THE HATFIELD HOUSE?

J. F. Devore, night clerk at the Hatfield House, 45 and 46 Ridge street, told the police that he believed that a man who answers the description sent out by Inspector Byrnes stopped at his place on Thursday last.

When Devore came on duty on Thursday night he says he saw written on a slate a message left for him by the day clerk. It read: "Wake up lodger in room 53 at 3.30. Says he has got important business."

At that hour Devore entered room No. 53 and awoke the lodger. He shook him by the arm. The man jumped out of bed and looked frightened. He did not say a word, and Devore took a good look at him.

Devore says that he learned that the man entered the lodge-house about 11 o'clock on Thursday morning, and said he was going to sleep. He asked the clerk to wake him up at 3.30 the same night, as he had an appointment to meet a woman. He gave the name of Isaac Derriger. All the Bowery lodgings-houses are being searched for a man named Derriger.

they were working on the murder case they declined to speak on the subject.

POLICE THEORIES.

During the early part of the afternoon the Oak street station was the headquarters of a dozen or more of Inspector Byrnes's detectives.

They were continually hurrying in and out, coming and going, sometimes singly and sometimes in couples, and it was evident that every effort was being made to follow up the track of the murderer.

Just before 1 o'clock Mary Minster, the housekeeper, who is the most important witness in the case, was brought in by Detective McNaught and taken into Capt. O'Connor's private room.

She had been sent earlier in the morning to the House of Detention, but it was reported that she had something more to tell.

No further arrest had been reported up to that hour. Detectives Frink, McNaught and Crowley were hovering about, and all of them looked full of mystery.

One member of the staff said that, in his opinion, the murderer was no other than "Jack the Ripper" himself, and he believed that he had been in the city for some time.

POSITION OF THE BODY WHEN FOUND.

time laying his plans for a series of crimes which would startle this city as they had the people of London.

Everything about the crime pointed to the fact that it was perpetrated by an accomplished assassin and with the utmost deliberation.

The methods were almost exactly the same as those of "Jack the Ripper," and a repetition of the same kind of butchery would undoubtedly occur unless the murderer should be discovered and arrested before he had time to arrange for another slaughter.

Another theory is that the murderer is only an imitator of "Jack the Ripper," who had become familiar with the methods of the Whitechapel assassin through the published accounts of his crimes.

It is also surmised that he may be a sailor, who, as soon as he had finished his bloody work, made his way from the hotel to his ship, and sailed away before the crime was discovered.

The Fourth Precinct has been so thoroughly sifted up within the last twelve hours that it would be almost impossible for a murderer whose description has been given with so much detail to find concealment there.

In the afternoon no policemen were stationed at the hotel, at Catherine slip and Water street. The place was shadowed, however, by detectives in citizens' dress, and all suspicious persons were carefully watched and followed.

It now appears that Eddie Fitzgerald, the bartender who was on duty Thursday night, did not see the companion of "Old Shakespeare" at all. He simply entered the name C. Kinloch in the register, which had been given to him by Mary Minster.

The couple did not go beyond the little hallway from which the stairs lead up to the floors above.

Two other arrests were made in Brooklyn by the Second street police.

John Foley and Frank McGovern were arrested on suspicion by Mounted Officer Frank. In a general way they answered the description of the man who went with Carrie Brown to the East River Hotel.

They were taken before Justice Walsh and remanded.

DID HE STAY AT THE HATFIELD HOUSE?

J. F. Devore, night clerk at the Hatfield House, 45 and 46 Ridge street, told the police that he believed that a man who answers the description sent out by Inspector Byrnes stopped at his place on Thursday last.

When Devore came on duty on Thursday night he says he saw written on a slate a message left for him by the day clerk. It read: "Wake up lodger in room 53 at 3.30. Says he has got important business."

At that hour Devore entered room No. 53 and awoke the lodger. He shook him by the arm. The man jumped out of bed and looked frightened. He did not say a word, and Devore took a good look at him.

Devore says that he learned that the man entered the lodge-house about 11 o'clock on Thursday morning, and said he was going to sleep. He asked the clerk to wake him up at 3.30 the same night, as he had an appointment to meet a woman. He gave the name of Isaac Derriger. All the Bowery lodgings-houses are being searched for a man named Derriger.

THEY WERE WORKING ON THE MURDER CASE THEY DECLINED TO SPEAK ON THE SUBJECT.

POLICE THEORIES.

During the early part of the afternoon the Oak street station was the headquarters of a dozen or more of Inspector Byrnes's detectives.

They were continually hurrying in and out, coming and going, sometimes singly and sometimes in couples, and it was evident that every effort was being made to follow up the track of the murderer.

Just before 1 o'clock Mary Minster, the housekeeper, who is the most important witness in the case, was brought in by Detective McNaught and taken into Capt. O'Connor's private room.

She had been sent earlier in the morning to the House of Detention, but it was reported that she had something more to tell.

IRONCLAD BLOWN UP.

A Chilean Rebel Ship Destroyed by a Government Torpedo.

The Loss of Life by the Disaster Is Reported Very Large.

It Was the Almirante Blanco that Succumbed to the Destroyer.

THEY WERE WORKING ON THE MURDER CASE THEY DECLINED TO SPEAK ON THE SUBJECT.

POLICE THEORIES.

During the early part of the afternoon the Oak street station was the headquarters of a dozen or more of Inspector Byrnes's detectives.

They were continually hurrying in and out, coming and going, sometimes singly and sometimes in couples, and it was evident that every effort was being made to follow up the track of the murderer.

Just before 1 o'clock Mary Minster, the housekeeper, who is the most important witness in the case, was brought in by Detective McNaught and taken into Capt. O'Connor's private room.

She had been sent earlier in the morning to the House of Detention, but it was reported that she had something more to tell.

No further arrest had been reported up to that hour. Detectives Frink, McNaught and Crowley were hovering about, and all of them looked full of mystery.

One member of the staff said that, in his opinion, the murderer was no other than "Jack the Ripper" himself, and he believed that he had been in the city for some time.

THEY WERE WORKING ON THE MURDER CASE THEY DECLINED TO SPEAK ON THE SUBJECT.

POLICE THEORIES.

During the early part of the afternoon the Oak street station was the headquarters of a dozen or more of Inspector Byrnes's detectives.

They were continually hurrying in and out, coming and going, sometimes singly and sometimes in couples, and it was evident that every effort was being made to follow up the track of the murderer.

Just before 1 o'clock Mary Minster, the housekeeper, who is the most important witness in the case, was brought in by Detective McNaught and taken into Capt. O'Connor's private room.

She had been sent earlier in the morning to the House of Detention, but it was reported that she had something more to tell.

No further arrest had been reported up to that hour. Detectives Frink, McNaught and Crowley were hovering about, and all of them looked full of mystery.

One member of the staff said that, in his opinion, the murderer was no other than "Jack the Ripper" himself, and he believed that he had been in the city for some time.

THEY WERE WORKING ON THE MURDER CASE THEY DECLINED TO SPEAK ON THE SUBJECT.

POLICE THEORIES.

During the early part of the afternoon the Oak street station was the headquarters of a dozen or more of Inspector Byrnes's detectives.

They were continually hurrying in and out, coming and going, sometimes singly and sometimes in couples, and it was evident that every effort was being made to follow up the track of the murderer.

Just before 1 o'clock Mary Minster, the housekeeper, who is the most important witness in the case, was brought in by Detective McNaught and taken into Capt. O'Connor's private room.

She had been sent earlier in the morning to the House of Detention, but it was reported that she had something more to tell.

No further arrest had been reported up to that hour. Detectives Frink, McNaught and Crowley were hovering about, and all of them looked full of mystery.

One member of the staff said that, in his opinion, the murderer was no other than "Jack the Ripper" himself, and he believed that he had been in the city for some time.

THEY WERE WORKING ON THE MURDER CASE THEY DECLINED TO SPEAK ON THE SUBJECT.

POLICE THEORIES.

During the early part of the afternoon the Oak street station was the headquarters of a dozen or more of Inspector Byrnes's detectives.

They were continually hurrying in and out, coming and going, sometimes singly and sometimes in couples, and it was evident that every effort was being made to follow up the track of the murderer.

Just before 1 o'clock Mary Minster, the housekeeper, who is the most important witness in the case, was brought in by Detective McNaught and taken into Capt. O'Connor's private room.

She had been sent earlier in the morning to the House of Detention, but it was reported that she had something more to tell.

SOLDIER LYNCHERS.

Murderer Hunt Shot by Men from Walla Walla's Garrison.

The Commander and the Sheriff Powerless to Prevent.

Guards Kept the Citizens from Passing Before the Jail.

THEY WERE WORKING ON THE MURDER CASE THEY DECLINED TO SPEAK ON THE SUBJECT.

POLICE THEORIES.

During the early part of the afternoon the Oak street station was the headquarters of a dozen or more of Inspector Byrnes's detectives.

They were continually hurrying in and out, coming and going, sometimes singly and sometimes in couples, and it was evident that every effort was being made to follow up the track of the murderer.

Just before 1 o'clock Mary Minster, the housekeeper, who is the most important witness in the case, was brought in by Detective McNaught and taken into Capt. O'Connor's private room.

She had been sent earlier in the morning to the House of Detention, but it was reported that she had something more to tell.

No further arrest had been reported up to that hour. Detectives Frink, McNaught and Crowley were hovering about, and all of them looked full of mystery.

<